Rome as first Seen—the Campagna—the Tiber— the Seven Worders of the World reduced to On-St Peters Church—its Front—the In-teror—its Dome and thes therefrom. Rows, March 20th, 1955.

Rorae is situated in the valley of the Tiber, which divides it in two unequal parts, running circuitously through it from the north to the south. Southerly and south-easterly it stretches sa far back and up the sides of the ancient seven bills upon which the old city stood. These hills are from one hundred to one hundred and seven- more he realizes its greatness. I yesterday visiis it is to de to beads, the two ty-five for the level of the sizer, and ted it for the fourth time; having spent the botter from which fine views can be had of the whole from which fine views can be had of the whole part of three days have been were more in- ground that the city and surrounding country. The Campagna my curiouty and autonishment were more in- ground that the u. y. which takes place at Kenosha- is seen in every direction, there being no auburbs or villages to obstruct the view. In the south, and whow passengers are to be carried in the distance are the colabrated Pontine marsh- ments by which the immense weight of the whole es-in the west and north-west the horizon meets the Campagna, and on all other sides the eyes rest upon the picturesque Sahne, Appenines, and Cumassan ranges of hills which form a circle at some fifteen or twenty miles distant. The thet pervades the building as a whole. Byron most distant tops of the Appenines are covered thus gives his own impressions on his first seewith snow-but the others more near appear log it, in his Childe Harold; chequered with villages, ruios, and occasion a monument of some kind towering up far above all others. As viewed now from some emisthe Campagna resembles, as I have before re marked, our western prairies, and I have no doubt the great Pontine marshes lying between Rome and Naples correspond with our low wet prairies. The Campagna between here and the sea, a distance of some fifteen miles, very much resembles RockPrairie in our state in June. There There are the same deep ravines and gorges quite up to the city walls, the same as nonz Janceville, then beyond the prairie stretches off in irregular undulations and occasional long belts of level, the otell gence of our readers to fine, dry land, as there is between that place and Delavan

The river Tiber is spanned by a number of fine ridge a. It is about the size of Rock river, but deep, with low naked banks and a rapid current. It still has the same yellow appearance that it had thousands of years ago. This is occasioned by the vellow sand that is mixed with the water. for it is never clear but always turbid. Most of the city lies south of the river. The population of Rome in her palmy days exceeded three milhon-it now numbers about one hundred and seventy-five thousand.

The first impressions on seeing the city are well described by an American writer who says: "The view of the majestic ruins, the solemn graudeur of the churches and palaces, the recollections of the past, the religious customs, the magic and almost melaucholy tranquility which pervades the city, the enjoyment of the endless reasures of art-all conspire to raise the mind of the traveller to a high state of excitement.-The churches palaces, villas, squares, streets, founteme, aqueducta, antiquities, ruins-in short everything proclaims the sucient majesty and the present greatness of Rome."

There are only two or three aircest that recen r ch a reviluon must come, and ble those in modern cities—the balance are narand other Italian cities, with less filth. It there fore presents one forest of edifices, with the dou and sures of its three hundred and fifty churche above, beardes nearly as many more of all the other public buildings. These are merely the outlines as one sees them from the top of the Pracise hill in the north of the city.

The historians of ancient times united in the opinion.to which the world has assented for more than twenty conturies, that there were sever wonders of the world and only seven, to wit :-The Temple of Diana at Ephenes, the magnificent Sepulchre of the King of Manselus, from which the word mausoleum is derived, the bronze

But the interior of this majestic temple, it is almost impossible to describe. The great altar inne of is seen in the distance. It consists of four spiral murble columns some 80 feet high, on which rests the baldscebico or, grand canopy of solid brouge, surmounted by a globe and cross. The emppy slone is said to have cost $100,000, and weight 186,000 lbs. In front of this is a shrine and crypt. Around the shrine on a level with the floor church, is a circular ballustrade of marble, and from this are suspended 112 latops which are burning night and day. A double flight of steps lead down to the shrine; at the in the arrivate of the steps lead down to the shrins; at the point of steps lead down to the shrins; at the point of the steps in front of the tomb of St.

part of three days there before, and I found that creased by the last visit, when I accended to its account and realised fully the plane and arrangestructure is supported.

To many the first view does not fully cause the visiter to realize this greatness of design, and the great beauty and harmony of proportion

When it is considered that St. Peter's church sovers an area equal to 5 acres of land, with dorne of which the top is 450 feet from the pave ment, and its interior on the same scale of greatbest and grandeur, a more miquie descriptio would not be expected. Indeed a volume might would not be expected. Indeed a volume might be written with much interest to the reader of the details.

From the dome, one of the most delightful landscapes presents itself—the mountains in the distance on the one side—the Mediteranean on the West, and the campagns, now one see of groon, all around it. The secant to the roof is easy and gradual, so much so that a horse and burgy might be driven up with perfect case.—

The great dome above is double, and within the walls are the circular stairs leading to the top. There are some things I think in had taste, and as St. Peter himself, and a number of others give them the appearance of negro saints—whoreas they are all supposed to be white.—Ag in there are many of the statues of an imaginary obstacter entirely, and from this recent get the tentile benefit. It was one of the statues of an imaginary would be more appropriate at this age in a theatre than a church. Again there are long, rampant and saleep, and various other quadrapad as well as birds, which seem to be out of place.

RAMBLES IN EUROPE-NO. 16.

Rome as first Scen—the Campagna—the Tiber— the Sevent Worders of the World reduced to One—St. Peters Church—the Front—the In-terior—its Dome and view therefrom. Roue, March 20th, 1855.

Rome is situated in the valley of the Tiber, which divides it in two unequal parts, running circuitously through it from the north to the south. Southerly and south-easterly it stretches se far back and up the sides of the ancient seven bills upon which the old city stood. These hills ere from one hundred to one hundred and seventy-five felt high aboye the level of the river, and from which fine views can be had of the whole city and surrounding country. The Campagna which takes place at Kenoaba. Is seen in every direction, there being no suburbs or villages to obstruct the year. In the south, in the distance, are the colebrated Pontine marshse-in the west and north-west the horizon meets the Campagua, and on all other sides the eyes reat open the picturesque Saline, Appenines, and Cumacan ranges of hills which form a cirwith snow-but the others more near appear chequered with villages, ruins, and occasionally a monument of some kind towering up far above all others. As viewed now from some eminence the Campagua resembles, as I have before re marked, our western prairies, and I have no doubt the great Fontine marshes lying between Borne and Naples correspond with our low wet prairies. The Campagna between here and the resembles Hock Prairie in our state, in June, There are few improvements beyond the city walls. There are the same deep ravines and gorges quite up to the city walls the same as near Janeaville .-

> undulations and occasional long belts of level, fine, dry land, as there is between that place and Delayan. The river Tiber is spanned by a number of fine bridges. It is about the size of Rock river, but deep, with low naked banks and a rapid current. It still has the same yellow appearance that i had thousands of years ago. This is occasioned by the yellow sand that is mixed with the water. for at is never clear but always turbid. Most of the city lies wouth of the river. The population of Rome in her palmy days exceeded three millinn-it now numbers about one hundred and then beyond the prairie stretches off in irregular perenty-five thousand. The first impressions on seeing the city are well described by an American writer who eags: "The view of the respectic ruine, the solemn grandear of the churches and palaces, the recollections of the past, the religious customs, the und an ount, we, are, but we magic and almost melaucholy tranquility which pervades the city, the enjoyment of the endless reasures of art-all conspire to raise the mind of the traveller to a high state of excitement-The churches, palaces, villas, squares, strasts, fountains, aquaducts, antiquities, roins—in short everything proclaims the socient majesty and the oresent greatness of Rome." There are only two or three streets that resen ble those in modern cities ... the balance are narrow streets and lanes similar to those of Gence and other Italian cities, with less filth. It there fore presents one forest of edifices, with the domand spires of its three hundred and fifty churchs above, besides nearly so many more of all the other public buildings. These are merely the outlines as one sees them from the top of the Pincian hill in the north of the city.

The historians of ancient times united in the opiniou, to which the world has assented for more than twenty conturies, that there were seven wonders of the world and only seven, to wit .-The Tample of Diana at Epheeus, the magnificent Sepulchre of the King of Mansolus, from which the word mausoleum is derived, the bronne Columbus of the Sun in Rhodes, the statue of Juputer On mone of gold and ivory, wrought by the tomortal Phidias, the palace of Cyrus, King of Media, built by Memnon, of stones united by gold, the walls of Babylon, constructed by Semenius, of brick, pitch and iron, and the Pyramids of Egypt, whose shadows are never reflected beyond their base.

To the people of those distant ages they may have been as they were, and those that now servive the lapse of time and "wreck of worlds," wonders indeed; but that they shall continue to position, and was well played, but requires an e called the seven wonders still. I humbly proest. It does seem to me that the whole wonders ought, in this practical, go-shead age, be reduced one and that St. Peters Church. Of this Mr.

Gibbon, the eminent historian, said that it was Gibbon, the eminent historian, said that it was "the most glorious structure that ever has been applied to the use of religion."

The site of this church is undoubtedly the sune spot where St. Peter suffered martyrdom. In the year unnety, the then Bishop of Rome and who had been ordeined by St. Peter himself sected an oratory on the place made sanctified by the blood of this early martyr. In 306 Constanting the Great, built in its stead a basilion, stanting the read the value of a court of inster.

The dead this composition last it was withing the was rethered in the walls of a vast cathedral in Germany; and I need not remark that the effect there of such a court from the unition was probably greater than it sould be in any concert room. The well studied preductions of our powerful mule chorus seldom fail to give satisfaction, and they were very happy in their success this even in the blood of this early martyr. In 306 Constanting the Great point in its stead a basilion, and the concert. This continued to be the great attraction among Christians natil the year 1150, a period of nearly twelve bundred years, when Pope Nicholas V commenced the present colossal structure. The time of building and completing it extended over the reign of forty-three Popes, and occupied more than three hundred years. The expense was so great that to meet it and carry on the work led to the sale of indulgences. This was carried to such an extent in its abuse during the pontificates of Julius II and Leo X, that it led directly to the Reformution.

When it is considered that St. Peter's church overs an area equal to 6 acres of laud, with a doing of which the top is 450 feet from the DATE ment, and its interior on the same scale of great cess and grandeur, a more minute description would not be expected. Indeed a volume might be written with much interest to the reader, of the details.

From the dome, one of the most delightful landscares presents itself—the mountains in the distance on the one side—the Moditeranean on the West, and the campagna, now one sea of green, all around it. The assent to the roof is easy and gradual, so much so that a horse and buggy might be driven up with perfect case.—
The great dome above is double, and within the walls a c the circular stairs leading to the top.

There are some things I think in bad taste walls a c the circular stain leading to the top.

There are some things: I think in bad taste such as St. Peter himself, and a number of others are some their personnel. It was one of the shells of some executed in brenks, which from the lapse of time give them the appearance of negro saints—whereas: they are all supposed to be white.

Again there are many of the statues of an imaginary character entirely, and from their scarty drapery would be more appropriate at this again a theatre than a church. Again there are lions rampant and select and various other quadrapeds as well as birds, which seem to be out of the control batteries in three ters, and very powerful batteries in three ters, and very powerful batteries in three ters, and very powerful batteries they are, well applied with 13-inch mothers or. It was one of the shells reason that seems there exists betteries that wounded Armet yester-day. We oppose these batteries with the right portion of the Euglish left attack.

Next comes the creek that runs up toward us, in which the Russians can put ships that can fire a theatre than a church. Again there are lions a most powerful assemblage of cannon against which the principal force of the English left attack is directed. We have the buttery all to ourselves, as wa get the entire benefit of the complete of the shells of the status of the shells of the status of the status of the status of the shells of the shell of the shells of the shell of the shells of the shells of the shells of the shell of the shells of the shells of the shell of the shells of the shells of the shells of the shells of the shell of the shell of the shell of the shell of the shells of the shell of the shells of the shells of the shells of the shell of the shell of the shells of the shell of the shell of the shells of the shells of the shells of the shells of t peds as well as birds, which seem to be out of

But it will be remembered that this is a different age from what it was when St. Peter's was orected, also a different country from our own, and less subject to critician for those reasons.-But where there is so much to admire and so little to disapprove, it seems almost a sacrilege to mention is. Like the faults of great men, they are forgotton and over-looked by an admiring world. F.

Our Musical Society.

A correspondent of Dwight's Journal of Music (Boston,) writing under date of Milwaukes, April 28, gives the following account of the last concert of our Musical Society;

It you had been here last evening, I think you would have been much pleased with the well diled 54th concert of the Milwanker Mosical Society, of which this is the programme:

PARTII

1. Overtupe to the opera of the Vestals, for orrus for male voices, the accompaniment

3. Cantata for soprano contests.
4. Chould not wish for a better programmon than this. Every number was well done.
It think you could not wish for a better programmon than this. Every number was well done.
The symphony, which had been in careful rehersal of almost a month, was as correctly and officitively rendered by our well-drilled orchests as I have best in this country, except in the concerts of the Germania Society. The charming Andante cantable was particularly well conceived, and a graceful and delects execution made it very successful. Spontini's overture to the Vistale has fine and beautifully worked compositions and was well played, but requires an orchestra by Mozart, to C major, is a aplendid affine and was excellently done by Madame Kramer, a German lady, who is possessed of a beau-tiful volumnous and metallic merzo-soptano.—

It is a knoll which commands must all the Russian works about the town, and enflades many of our advanced trenches. It was always considered our weak point. About five weeks ago the Russians made a ledgment about half-way between the tower and the Manelon. The French tried to drive them out of this, and fasied. Since that the Russians have advanced on the Mamelon itself, and in spite of all the efforts of the French, have retained it; and constructed on it a battery of 13 large gues.

which approaches like a round shot, but has the pleasing trick of bursting when it reaches you;
so that you have to run a double risk—first of the shot itself, and then of the pieces.
"Next comes the mortar-shell, which, though really the worst of the large projectiles, I some-mule chorus seldom fail to give satisfaction and they were very happy in their success this evening. I need not add that that chorus and Terzetto from the "Creation" furnished an excellent finale to the concert. The necessary acquaintance of the ordestra, as well as the chorus, with Hayden's oratorios, secured a successful interpretation of this magnificant and gigantic composition to the suddence. The lovely Texestic which was necompated in parfect tune and with that expressive piano which adds so much to the beauty of the wood-harmory passages, contracts magnifilly with the powerfully rolling fugued chorus, which precedes and follows it.

This connect has been another remunerating trumph for our excellent conductor, Haus Balakis who useer resis where it concerns the advangement of the true cause of the divine Art.

Then, again, our in-formation concerning the resources of the enemy inside the town is so uncertain and so contradic-ter, there was no guided to appear. y indice the town is so uncertain and so contradic-boy, that one has no guide to go upon. No one who has seen the awfut strength of the defences, attending as they do completely around this side with tens of batteries and entreochments one behind the other, and frequent salient points thanking the snare line, and bringing a tremen-dous cross fire upon every point, but must feel, that an assault now will be attended with far greater carrage than it would have been six months since.

"And yat that assault must be made, and in my humble opinion, within the next ten days. God grant that it may be successful, for on it will depend the safety of the entire army. I know that the assaulting columns are told off, and the engineer officer who has to lead them, but it is kept a secret. There are at the present moment in the left attack only three engineers between whom it will he, for it will be a captain, and one of our captains was wounded three or four days of our captains was wounded three or four days ago. We shall then push on and try to anter the tower works with the retreating Rus-sians. Once within the tower, we shall sense all the rest of their lines in meetre, and the South side of the town must be ours. Then comes the problem; for the North tide is a still more pow-erful fortress than the South, and unless the fleet can help us, we shall be completely under their

The Campagna is seen in every direction, there being no suburbs or villages to obstruct the view. In the south, in the distance, are the colebrated Pontine marshes in the west and north-west the horizon meets the Campagua, and on all other sides the eyes rest spon the picturesque Saline, Appenines and Oumaean ranges of hills which form a circle at some fifteen or twenty miles distant. Tho most distant tops of the Appenines are covered with snow-but the others more near appear chequered with villages, ruins, and occasionally monument of some kind towering up far above all others. As viewed now from some eminence the Campagna rescmbles, as I have before remarked, our western prairies, and I have no loubt the great Pontine marshes lying between Rome and Naples correspond with our low wet prairies. This is occasioned by the yellow sand that is mixed with the water, for it is never clear but always turbid. Most of the city lies south of the river. The population of Rome in her palmy days exceeded three million-it now numbers about one hundred and eaventy-five thousand.

"The view of the majestic ruins, the solemn gran deur of the churches and palaces, the recolleceverything proclaims the ancient majesty and the present greatness of Rome."

There are only two or three streets that resen ble those in modern cities—the balance are nerrow streets and lanes similar to those of Genou. and other Italian cities, with less filth. To the people of those distant ages they may have been as they were, and those that now survive the lapse of time and "wreck of worlds," wonders indeed; but that they shall continue to be called the seven wonders still, I humbly protest. It does seem to me that the whole wonder ought, in this practical, go-shead age, be reduced one, and that St. Peters Church. Of this Mr. Gibbou, the emirent historian, said that it was "the most glorious structure that ever has been applied to the use of religion." The site of this church is undoubtedly the sune spot where St. Poter suffered martyrdem In the year musety, the then Bishop of Romand who had been ordained by St. Peter himself erected an oratory on the place made sanctified erected an orators on the place made sanctified by the blood of this early martyr. In 306 Our stanting the Great, built in its stead a bestica, which was in the nature of a court of justice, and also at the same time used by the early pretation of the magnificent and gigantic comprete to the address of the property of the court of the pretation. and also at the same time used by the early Obristians for churches. This continued to be the great attraction among Christians until the year 1450, a period of nearly twelve hundred beauty of the wood-harmory passages, contrasts negatily with the powerfully rolling fugued charm, which precedes and follows it.

This concert has been another remunerating and completing it extended over the reign of and also at the same time used by the early forty-three Popes, and occupied more than thren accoment of the true cause of the divine Art. hundred years. The expense was so great that

The more a person sees of the church, the note he realizes its greatness. I yesterday visited it for the fourth time, having spent the better part of three days there before, and I found that my curiouty and astoniahment were more inreased by the last visit, when I ascended to its automit and realised fully the plans and arrangements by which the immense weight of the whole lructure is supported.

To many the first view does not fully cause the visiter to realize this greatness of design, and the gree, beauty and harmony of proportion that pervades the building as a whole. Byron thre gives his own impressions on his first secing is, in his Childe Barold;

When it is considered that St. Peter's church povers an area equal to 5 acres of laud, with a ome of which the top is 450 feet from the pave ment, and its interior on the same scale of great sees and grandeur, a more minute description would not be expected. Indeed a volume might be written with much interest to the reader, of

There are some things 1 think is bad taste uch as St. Peter himself, and a number of others executed in branks, which from the lapse of time give them the appearance of proto saintswhereas they are all supposed to be white .-Again there are many of the statues of an imagnary character entirely, and from their scanty drapery would be more appropriate at this age n a theatre than a church. the square in front with the west ends adjoining two patallel galieries, 350 feet long and 23 feet broad which communicate with the church, is a magnificent colonoade, by Berolm, an architect of great reputation. This collonado is 60 feet in width, supported by four rows of columns, so arranged that two carriages can pass abreast between the iener columns. The number of columns in both colonnades is 284, exclusive of 64 pilsetor. On the entablatures or roofs of these colonnaics are 192 statucs of Samts, each 12 feet long.

Passing up therefore through this imposing square, surrounded by a half circle on each side with these colonnades and galleries, the visitor beholds the front of St. Peter's, which is 368 ft. We have seen many notices of effigy burning in length, by 145 in height. It has three sto-account of it we could see at their other deser-ces in the rear.

Well, to proceed. Next to the Radan comes the Malakhoff Tower, which is the key of the whole position, and the spot where the assault will be made. It is considerably to the near of all the other batteries, so that if we obtain pussession of it we could see all their other detentions in the rear.

"In front of this tower, and about helf-way between it and the advanced works of the French right attack, is the fur-famed Mamelon hill-which is now causing such a stir. It is a knoll which comminds must all the Russian works about the commands must all the Russian works about the town, and enfiledes many of our advanced trenches. It was always considered our weak point. About fire weaks ago the Russians made a ledgment about helf-way between the town and the Marrelon. The French tried to drive them out of this, and fatied. Since that the Russians have advanced on the Mannelon itself, and in spite of all the efforts of the French, have retained it, and constructed on it a battery of 13 large gues.

nearly helf a minute, and in the night you can see it quite plainly, owing to its bearing the first. It glances along very genecibly, rising to a great height and making a gentle whistle every now and then like a peewat or player, which be comes louder till it drops. Although you can see it all the way, it as a most difficult thing to tall where it will fall; and none but the oldest hands (men of whom it is said that they have got so inured to fire that a cannon ball would hop off the pit of their stemachs) can really make a good guess as to where they will drop. a good guess as to where they will drop. What makes it wome than a guo shell is that the former flying so low retains its impetus, so that if it is once past you before it bursts all the pieces will continue to fly forward and you are safe.

"Whereas as the mortar shell is pitched as high as it will go into the sir, and then drops, the pieces have no other impetus than what the bursting charge gives them to fly in every direction for a radius of upward of 200 yards, and sometimes considerably more. But my greatest horror of all, and the deadliest for we have, is the Ruestan rifle bullet. It is not so perfect as ours but as Mercutio says, 'It will do well enough' I give you a skotch of it the size of life. (Here is given an admirable sketch of the bullet, which la, like the English conical.) This little gentlemin gives you no warning, but flies about all day long, and ranges 1,200 yards. At a quarter of that distance it will go through two men.

"You ask me my opinion about the singe. In the first place, I feel no great confidence in peaking about it, having had no previous practical knowledge of the subject. Then, again, our information concerning the resources of the enemy inside the town is so uncertain and so contradictory, that one has no guide to go upon. No one who has seen the awful strength of the defences, atteithing as they do completely around this side with tiers of batteres and entercohnems one atretching as they do completely around this side with there of batteries and entrenchments one

There are at the present moment in the left attack only three engineers between whom it will lee, for it will be a captain and one of our captains was wounded three or four days ago.
